

When your employees are your last line of defense against ransomware and phishing attacks, make sure they

KnowBe4

Human error. Conquered.

These days, every company is at risk of falling victim to a cyberattack through ransomware and phishing scams. As these attacks become more advanced, so do your user awareness training needs. Make sure your employees know how to not only recognize a phishing email, but also alert your security team in order to analyze the email.

Dean Dorton and KnowBe4 have partnered to provide your employees with the most popular integrated platform for security awareness training, combined with simulated phishing attacks.

Here's how it works.

Your organization's IT department creates and customizes a phishing campaign template.

IT sends the phishing campaign to all employees.

An employee/user replies to the simulated phishing email, which can be easily tracked by IT.

IT educates the employees. Once the employees are educated, they can safely forward email threats to your organization's security team with KnowBe4's Phish Alert button.

The security team can see reporting for phishing campaigns.
